Adisa Haznadar has experienced a lot in her 27 years. War in her home country of Bosnia, exchange programs in Wisconsin and Hawaii, obtaining her Master's degree in Greece, and now her doctorate at none other than Springfield College just to name a few.

The world traveler and lifelong learner has made every single one of her dreams come true thus far, and still has many years to accomplish much more.
"You don't ask where the limit is because there isn't a limit," Haznadar explained with confidence.
Haznadar is just getting started.

The start to her story begins in Sarajevo, Bosnia, in 1992. Haznadar and her twin sister, Harisa, had just turned seven years old and they were in the dead center of a heated war that sent her father to the front line while their home was raided and taken over.
The Bosnian War was a result of the breakup of Yugoslavia. Slovenia and Croatia successfully cut themselves from the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia, and the multicultural Bosnia wanted that same freedom. The Bosnian Serbs, who had created their own republic supported by the Serbian government, rejected the vote to make Bosnia its own independent country. Ser-

While several freshmen, transfers and leaders are still getting over the amazing four days that was New Student Orientation (NSO), six members of this campus are itching to start planning for next year already.

Diana Harkness, general chair, Patrick Smith, head men's leader, Allison Rivelli, head women's leader, Sam Zapatka, head transfers leader, Kerstin Lindrooth, head programmer, and Gregory Tozzi, head program leader, are the six new members of the NSO board, and they are more than excited to get the ball rolling for next year.

"[It feels] pretty damn good," Zapatka explained on being elected head transfer leader.
While the crew is happy to be elected, not all of them were entirely sure they wanted to be NSO leaders in the first place.
"I got involved with NSO kind of randomly, to be honest," Harkness said. "Freshman
